Mods, THIS is what a sticky should be. A real freaking example of 24/7 TRUMP RALLY HYPE. Actual sourced news, new info, proven support for our president at a time when people think Pence is turning on us... Don't sticky random 'tick-tock' tweets. Sticky this.

2 hours where they will just ignore anything, and then go back and vote to confirm Biden just like Pelosi and McConnell want them to.

L.[oser] Lin Wood is a delusional psychopath.

Pence is a great man who has tirelessly defended Trump since day 1.

Edit:

BREAKING: It is being reported that L.[oser] Lin Wood has just been involuntarily committed. Spokesman said that he was determined by court to likely be a "danger to self or others." As he was being transported to facility, Mr. Wood could be heard shouting "WWG1WGA!"

Fuck Lin Wood. People latching into his every word as if it's truth. You actually think Trump would stick by Pence for FOUR years if he were a traitor? These idiots think Lin somehow has more Intel than Trump. Apparently all it takes to get people to dump Pence is a couple of mysteriously worded accusations with zero proof. An envelope is their only "proof" which is laughable.

No offense, but “doomers” TOLD YOU Wood was nuts.

That is what we are called every single time we cast doubt on any number of theories that we, correctly, predict will fall apart and prove untrue. Some TDW's are hating the wrong people here.

We hate and doom and gloom about fake stories, fake news, crazy conspiracies for which there is absolutely no evidence, and you people call us doomers. If we don't believe in watermarked ballots, servers getting seized from Germany, if we don't believe in bloviating lawyers that talk too much trash without producing, we are the ones everyone says should be kicked off the board. It's good to have high energy, bold, and confident people on your team but it becomes a liability when they're wildly unpredictable.

I think Lin Wood has good intentions but is a little bit crazy at times. You can't believe everything he says just because he said it. I think he's right on some things (like Roberts being compromised) and wrong on others (like Pence being a traitor).

The problem is people stick to believing EVERYTHING a person says and put all their trust in that one person, to the point where if you question anything that person said, you're all of a sudden the bad guy. Lin Wood is a human being who can be right on somethings and completely wrong on others.

Or he's just fucking crazy. Why does it have to be a conspiracy always with you people? Holy shit. Seriously you're not fox Mulder. If you have to connect more than one or two dots your conspiracy theory is garbage. It has always been proven that the things that turn out to be true are incredibly simple. Incredibly simple. There is physical evidence readily available and the “scheme” is simple.

He may be nuts, he may be getting bad information, but I hate with a passion how this place immediately jumps to conspiracy theories. You do understand this conspiracyfagging hurts the administration, right? Ruins his credibility with normal people. The associate the president and all of his positions and his fight against election fraud with conspiracy faggots. It's been proven repeatedly and you people are just blind to it. If anything is a psyop around here, it's conspirscyfagging to make Trump supporters look NUTS.

So you imagine Lin Wood gets off on followers? Or he needs the publicity? He represented Richard Jewell and Nick Sandmann. And represented Kyle Rittenhouse initially until another lawyer on his team took over. But he needs followers.

Have you actually read his tweets today? He's talking about the rape and murder of kids on video as blackmail material for the elites. Perhaps Lin Wood is the beginning of the complete declass. Carnival barker indeed.

The only counter arguments presented are he represented Jewel, Sandman and Rittenhouse. While admirable I do not conflate those past cases with his current credibility. The current claims demand evidence and he is not producing.

One thing that Wood did that is HIGHLY questionable is that he has staunchly supported boycotting the Senate run off in Georgia. And this after Trump had one rally there and is having another one today to push voting for the Repub senators.

Jewell had MANY lawyers, Sandmann was an easy settlement (and he did settle, not win), and Rittenhouse has multiple lawyers but Wood is the one who kept the crowdfunded money for absolutely no reason.

But retards don't understand this and think Sam Rockwell's character in the movie is Wood even though he clearly is not and is actually Jewell's first lawyer who was a real estate lawyer who jumped in to save him from the FBI, that Sandmann won his cases and is a multimillionaire, and that Rittenhouse's trial is going very well. They also think all this stuff he just found out is new but he probably just started watching some Mouthy Buddha videos.

Another interesting thing is that Wood asking for a fuckton of money for Sandmann almost got his case and the anonymous Covington Boys' case thrown out. The judges thought he was fucking with them and were ready to dismiss. The Covington Boys were shooting for college money while keeping anonymity and they almost didn't get it because Wood was being a retard.

Watson Bryant was Jewell's first attorney. He is real and he does in fact still work in real estate. He had a bigger team than seen in the movie. Most attorneys work in teams. Even Dershowitz tells people he is not the one who got OJ acquitted. He always says it's a team.

I have noticed that on every post on TD, whatever the topic, the first 100 or so comments will be a divisive issue that has nothing to do with the subject of the post. This is a post about Pence, and the first 100 comments are trying to divide us on Lin Wood. A post might be about the Georgie tape, and the first 100 comments will be a debate about BLM. Another post might be a Project Veritas undercover video of CNN, and the first 100 comments will be a debate about abortion. Another post of Trump laying out Election Fraud and the first 100 posts are arguments about Q.

Is this intentional forum sliding? It just seems strange to me how consistent this is. I frequently get sidetracked reading the arguments and as I scroll down, I think, “Wait - what was this post about again?”

Maybe I am being paranoid but it's worth watching out for. Watch how many times the topic of a post is immediately derailed by the time of the first or second response on the highest rated comment. That will immediately spiral out into a chain of 100 additional responses. I would say I first started noticing this about three weeks ago.

This, and more precicely this:

Washington's final plan was for three crossings, with his troops, the largest contingent, to lead the attack on Trenton. A second column under Cadwalader was to cross at Dunk's Ferry and create a diversion to the south. A third column under Brigadier General James Ewing was to cross at Trenton Ferry and hold the bridge across the Assunpink Creek, just south of Trenton, in order to prevent the enemy's escape by that route.

By the way, the Third Column is YOU in DC who do not let the congressmen escape without doing their constitutional duty.

The Pence messages could be real or completely fake. If Pence was a mole who has been secretly flipped, Lin Wood bashing both him and Roberts makes the deep state think he's still on their team. Or he is a mole and Trump wants to prepare the people for that possibility.

Pence isn't going to overturn the election on his own. If he was going to do that he'd have been working hard the last month to build support from the GOP because he'd be attacked like nothing we've seen yet if he does it. The left will be in the streets rioting within 20 minutes. I like Pence, but I can't see him having the balls to face that bull head-on without having political backup.

Only way this thing ends well is if Patriots end it themselves.

I'll just say this, I do think there is an argument to be made Pence could do this and it could be considered constitutional. Similar situations have occurred. Thomas Jefferson as VP and head of the senate made a decision about counting some very controversial electoral votes that most thought should not be counted and that vote made him the next president.

Now, do I think it will play out in a similar way if that happened now? No I honestly don't. I think the SC would find against us if it got that far. I have to say we may have to try and eventually accept Biden as president unless we are willing to give up every comfort, luxury, and any peace for years to come. That is not going to be an easy decision to make.

If there is anything I've learned from all of this post-election lawsuit shit is that...

1. If you sue beforehand, it get's thrown out for not having a solid legal claim since there is no negatively affected party yet
2. If you sue immediately after being affected, it will get thrown out because you should have sued beforehand to try and alleviate the issue before you were affected
3. If you sue a few weeks later, it will get thrown out because it's too late, and you should have sued earlier right after you were affected

4. The whole judiciary is round-about-butt-fuck of a clown court that does not protect or rule on the U.S. Constitution

I love the guy but Pence was also an establishment Republican a very long time before he ever met Trump and he was the RNC's top pick to be Trump's VP.... That's why the RNC agreed to finally throw their support behind Trump in 2016, because he agreed to pick his running mate off of a very very short list that they provided... He picked Pence out of a very short list of die hard establishment Republicans at the time....

Now I don't know what in Prince's head or heart has changed since then, if anything, but these are the facts we know of at the present time.... And Pence actually going out of his way to try to stop that lawsuit the other day has really got me worried.....

Or a delay dog and pony show. People will be outside in force waiting and waiting. No news coming out of the capital and R's & D's just standing at the podium talking hour after hour. Their plan is knowing that most everyone will be gone the next day and then they can do what they want in the 11th hour.

The question for us is... when do we realize we're being played and placated?

This is a point WAY too many people have overlooked. A behind-the-scenes deal to delay everything knowing how many angry people may show up on Jan. 6th that might not be able to make it back again on either short notice or no set date at all. The "they're going to shut down the bridges and trains" stuff is all talk. The real plan is to put it off, waste a lot of people's time then finalize everything in secret when the guns, pitchforks and torches are gone and the Patriots have all gone back to work.

Exactly. They have one chance on January 6th to make things right. A delay should be considered a failure to do so. We can do the math on that one. We've had enough investigation and more than enough evidence. There's nothing that's going to happen in 10 days that hasn't happened or been learned already. It's just more time-wasting bullshit. Hence: Failure from "our side" yet again.

This fight can't be limited to D.C. State legislators have to feel the wrath as well and the fight must be continued against the swamp rats when they return home, no matter how Jan. 6th turns out. This way they can't worm out of it by thinking, "All we have to do is get these people out of here and we can go back to doing what we want." It's also the best way to get as many Patriots involved as possible. Not everyone can manage a trip to D.C.

If Americans Actually started a civil war, it would be over days - weeks. The grassroots Right wing is far too powerful if organized. That's the problem - the government blocks all organization and makes individual Trump supporters too scared to fight. If Trump took on the mantle of General and started creating and organizing militia, it would be over so fast your head would spin.

There are no "goal posts."

January 20 is the only election-related date "set in stone" in the Constitution, under 20th Amendment.

It is a fact that Trump's first 4-year term will end on that date.

Nothing is final until then.

Do you think the military and DC police are gonna just let a bunch of people take house reps and senators hostage?

People keep focusing on charging the building, but not what happens next; when the biggest most well funded military planet decides a bunch of citizens shouldn't be sieging the entire US government apparatus.

It's not about what exactly happens; it's the fact that citizens will be attempting to physically overthrow a bunch of government people. That simple act will change the country for decades to come at a minimum. Yes, eventually all the patriots would be killed or arrested. But regardless, the line will be permanently crossed and will open the door to further drastic changes in this country.

A Biden presidency in what country? The country as it was before would cease to exist. It would be a Biden presidency in a country where combat against congress is on the table and the presidency is largely hollow and lacking power because right-wing people everywhere would be emboldened to disobey. It could even lead to civil war, right-wing insurgency, or peaceful dissolution of the country, and Biden would be president of whatever shithole the left becomes.

Similar to your other comment I replied to, you're thinking too much "within the rules." It's not about what he can do within the rules, it's about what it would mean if he attempted to break them. What would happen if Pence just stood up there and said "I'm not counting ANY votes because this whole election has been fucked." What would happen? The congress people would say "You have to, those are the rules." Then what if Pence said "No" ? What if Pence said "I recognize Trump as the next elected president" ?

Congress would again say "You're not allowed to do that." But does that matter? What happens if 50 million people in this country are done giving a fuck about the rules as well and decide to go with Pence?

I actually don't think any of that will happen, mind you. But I'm just saying. The laws of this country are just words on paper; ANYTHING that can be backed by a few tens of millions of people willing to fight physically is on the table.

I really think Pence should count them on a dominion tabulator.

And when he can't read the intent of what is handed him, it should go to adjudication, oh, about 90% of the time.

Sure, the Democrats (and RINOs) will call foul, but Pence will do a hand recount of the tally by printing out that tally and counting that tally up by hand. Oh look, same number.

Ultimately, what Pence says or does on the 6th doesn't matter because McConnell and the Senate have made it clear that they will not vote against Biden's electors. I will say that the fact that Pence says the evidence WILL be heard kind of implies that he will contest the electors. Like I said though, after those 2 hours of political theater known as "debate", the Senate and House will certify Biden regardless.

Pence looks genuinely irate here; I don't think it can be faked. The answer we all know in our hearts is the outcome that will need to occur, for better or for worse.

This whole thing -- all the outrage, the protest/rally -- is simply WE THE PEOPLE demanding that EVERYONE obey established laws and that blatant election fraud is prosecuted and justice served. That's it. That's all we really want.

The only way is for Pence to simply not count the 4 disputed states. And then force Congress to do something.

"Alabama... 8 voted trump

Georgia... no votes.

South Carolina... 9 votes Trump..."

That sorta thing.

Probably won't happen.

My understanding is that those electors were not included, even though some states did select or appoint alternates. So, he can't "choose" them... they won't be there. So only other option is to not count them.

Either way, if Pence does something, there's a chance.

He's pre-deciding the evidence if he does that. He's President of the Senate, he has to appear impartial. Remember, we're the play-by-the-rules side. He can't predispose his reaction to votes not presented to him yet.

He can't give the Dems and Rhinos any ammo to use against him when he has to make his decisions.

Perhaps he is planning on not counting states due to their unconstitutional election law changes, thus not even needing to worry about the actual fraud. Believe me, I want the fraud to be proven in front of all Americans so there will be no doubt left in anyone's mind. I just think that maybe some people are looking at it from a purely constitutional angle. Problem with that is half the country wants heads to roll due to the fraud they have seen, and winning simply because states changed their laws by executive order and judges won't satisfy the thirst for justice. We want people held accountable for what we all witnessed on November 3rd and 4th.

Violation of legislatures laws requires the lowest burden of evidence and is the correct path forward. What certain states did was entirely unconstitutional and its pretty easy to prove it. Compare the written laws to what actually took place or decrees/rulings outside of the legislature that effected the conduct of the election.

Fraud on the other hand is much harder to prove. We know it took place but proving it is much more difficult. Despite the video evidence we need more evidence to prove beyond reasonable doubt that fraud took place, you also need to determine who actively committed the fraud and how many votes were effected. Its not impossible to do but that type of legwork takes a very long time and is made even more difficult by blatant destruction of evidence.

And Congress won't do anything about it. We could have 365 days before Congress and nothing would happen. It doesn't matter what the law says if it is not being enforced and ignored by those who don't care about the rule of law in the first place.

He should toss both slates in contested states, and let the Democrats send it to SCOTUS and make Biden prove he won. SCOTUS has already said there is no standing for them to involve themselves in elections, so what is to stop Pence now?

If he, Pence, does not accept the republican slate of electors, it's over. Sure there will be a 2 hour “debate”, but when the time comes to vote, Trump needs to win the house and the senate to vote to pass the objection, and that's not going to happen.

If he does accept the republican slate, then it will be the democrats that call for the objection. They have the votes to pass it. Then the full election is thrown into the house where each state delegation gets 1 vote. Trump wins.

Or they refuse to pass the objection and the republican slate stands. Trump wins.

We'll know how its going to go by the time he reads Arizona.

I've always defended Pence although I did started having doubts recently, but then it's difficult not to, with all that's going on. When he says, "We all have our doubts regarding the election" Trump would have said: "We know this election has been stolen from us". When he says: "irregularities", Trump would have said "fraud". But then, maybe it's his role to remain as neutral as possible so the Democrats do not accuse him of being too partial - which he is, of course, but still, it allows him to play his role as VP perfectly.

It's telling that so many people here still give a fuck about optics. We are gonna get insulted by the media regardless of how "impartial" Pence looks.

I have stopped giving a fuck about optics, but the only hope I have at this point is that Pence is making this statement with optics in mind, and that he's going to do the right thing on the 6th.

...but he doesn't say fraud, calls it irregularities...and then says we will hear it. No where in the statement does he say anything actionable.

To you doomers some times you don't show all your cards. Why lay out exactly what you will be doing ? I know you want to know but have faith. If they say exactly what they will do this will give Democrats time to prep and fuck around.

At this point I'm just waiting and holding faith in my president.

Not a fan. Having a "day in congress" isn't what this is about. Doesn't pass the smell test.

Pence always fought for DJT. I don't think he will suddenly flip. He knows the Democrats are playing politics (said it himself) so I don't think he is likely to do the same. I bet he'll stand with Trump knowing full well Trump won EASILY.

"We will have our day in Congress".

Meaningless politician doublespeak. Spoken like an Android.

We all are watching you very closely VP Pence. Count wisely.

You must REJECT fraud. Refuse to count the votes and Trump wins.

This isn't saying anything though. It's campaign crowd pump up talk. "We'll have our day in congress". Great. What does that mean? Jack shit, because the numbers aren't there to throw out the electors! And what does Thursday look like Mike? We'll see what happens, but the path for Trump to be sworn in on the 20th is VERY narrow at this point. Thats not DOOOOOOOOOOMMMMER talk, thats fucking reality right now.

It's real simple. All he has to say is "If the electors have not been legally and constitutionally provided by the respective states, I will reject them and they will not be counted." That will get a court to listen.

Normally it's have your day in court, but none of the courts are willing to even look at the evidence. So it's have your day in “congress”....the most corrupt of the three branches...not promising

It's amazing how Trump videos on YouTube get hundreds of thousands of views, but anything from Biden isn't even half that. Most of the views I see are under 100,000. Most popular president, huh? I'm loving all the Trump hype. Went out yesterday, someone was wearing a Trump mask, businesses have metal Trump/Pence signs out, Trump bumper stickers. I even see people on plebbit talking about voting for Trump and they're not down-voted into oblivion.
